A MESSAGE FROM THE CHIEF CIVILIAN DIRECTOR

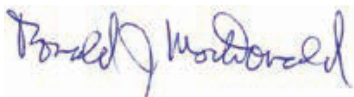

Being seriously harmed or losing a loved one in a police-involved incident is a difficult experience for families and communities. We recognize that you will need time to process what has happened and have developed this booklet of information to help support you during this difficult time.

The Independent Investigations Office of British Columbia (IIO) investigates all police-involved incidents which result in serious harm or death, regardless of whether there is any allegation of wrongdoing. The IIO does not investigate whether the affected person (the individual who has been seriously harmed or died) committed a criminal act. This booklet will provide information on how the IIO conducts a thorough investigation, potential outcomes, and resources which are available to you.

If you have any questions about the IIO, the status of the investigation, or available resources, the IIO's Affected Persons Liaisons (APL) are here to assist you and will be your main point of contact through to conclusion of the IIO investigation. Their contact information is located on the last page of this booklet.

On behalf of the IIO, I would like to express my sincere condolences if you have lost a loved one during the incident prompting our investigation.

Yours very truly,

Chief Civilian Director
Independent Investigations Office of British Columbia

WHO WE ARE

The Independent Investigations Office (IIO) of British Columbia is a civilian-led police oversight agency mandated to conduct investigations into police-related incidents of death or serious harm to determine whether or not any officer may have committed an offence. The IIO has jurisdiction over all of BC's policing agencies, including 11 municipal agencies, the RCMP, the South Coast BC Transportation Authority Police Service and the Stl'atl'imx Tribal Police Service. The IIO's jurisdiction extends to officers appointed as special provincial constables, municipal constables and includes on- and off- duty officers. The IIO's authority comes from the British Columbia Police Act, which requires the police to notify the IIO of an incident that may fall within its jurisdiction.

The IIO undertakes public interest investigations and conducts them to a criminal law standard. There does not need to be an allegation of wrongdoing for the IIO to conduct an investigation. The IIO gathers all evidence and reports back on the results. The IIO does this in as transparent a manner as practicable under the circumstances while respecting the integrity of the investigation and the privacy interests of those involved.

WHY IS THERE A POLICE AND AN IIO INVESTIGATION INTO THE SAME INCIDENT?

The IIO investigation focuses on the serious harm or death of the affected person and determines whether a police officer may have committed an offence during the course of an incident. A police investigation may still be undertaken if a crime is alleged to have occurred. For example, if the IIO's affected person is also accused of assault, they may be considered the suspect in a concurrent police investigation.

Importantly, where a matter of public interest is not referred to Crown Counsel (BC Prosecution Service) for the consideration of charges, the Chief Civilian Director (CCD) will release a public report outlining all of the relevant facts and reasons for the decision not to refer the matter to Crown Counsel. This allows the public to understand the basis for the decision.

The IIO is established under the Ministry of Attorney General and is led by a CCD who cannot ever have been a police officer. Although the IIO is part of the Ministry of Attorney General, all investigative decision making and the decision to issue a public report or refer a matter to Crown Counsel are completely independent from the Ministry.

APL PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

The Independent Investigations Office (IIO) Affected Persons Liaison (APL, or liaison) team provides support, information and referrals for Affected Persons (AP) and/or their families following a police-involved incident resulting in serious harm or death.

The APL is a full-time dedicated IIO employee who is the bridge between an affected person (and families) and the IIO investigative team. The APL assists affected persons and their families in an incident by explaining the role of the IIO and the investigative process, interpreting legislation, discussing how the various investigative agencies work together, facilitating access to support services in the community, and providing investigative updates through the life of the file.

When a death occurs, the liaison may assist the investigator in notifying the next of kin when required, and provides immediate crisis support to families in a police-involved fatality. They also provide community referrals for grief and loss.

The APL team strives to build connections for the AP and/or family with local community support services. This includes identifying local resources, bereavement programs, counselling and support groups across the province where available.

The role of the APL varies with each case and is tailored to meet the individual needs of an AP and/or their family members. Additional support may include but is not limited to:

- Immediate emotional support and practical assistance, such as arranging for temporary housing;
- Provide referrals to community service providers to address service needs of the AP or their family members (see Resources on page 12);
- Provide support and referral services to community members who may have not been directly involved in the incident but were affected by the incident (e.g. civilian witnesses who may be emotionally impacted by what they observed);
- Connect with an AP or family as needed to assist in their understanding of critical decisions, significant developments, and/or a case disposition (e.g. if the IIO will issue a public report or make a referral to Crown Counsel (BC Prosecution Service) for consideration of charges); and
- The APL will facilitate and liaise with community agencies and support networks to enable short-term, medium-term and long-term support plans and services to best support APs and families.

DOES THE IIO PROVIDE INFORMATION TO ANY MEMBER OF MY FAMILY THAT ASKS?

No. If you are an affected person, the IIO will provide updates only to you and anyone else you provide consent for us to update. If the affected person has died, only the next of kin will be provided with updates (usually the spouse or parent of the affected person), unless there is written consent for other persons to also receive updates.

WHY IS THE IIO ASKING ME FOR CONSENT TO ACCESS MEDICAL RECORDS?

Medical records are an important piece of evidence that the IIO investigation will require to understand the full extent of the injuries sustained.

IIO INVESTIGATIVE PROCESS

The IIO conducts public interest investigations to a criminal standard into the actions/inactions of a police officer when they may have caused serious harm to, or the death of, an individual.

REPORTING OF INCIDENT

When a police-involved incident resulting in death or serious harm is reported, the IIO will start an investigation which will include gathering all relevant evidence. Each investigation is different, however evidence can include police and witness interviews, Closed-Circuit Television (CCTV) analysis, GPS data, police radio communications, cell block video, police car video, pathology reports, medical information, toxicology reports, forensic exams, digital forensic analysis, cell phone analysis, DNA and fingerprint analysis, execution of judicial (search warrant) applications, subject matter experts, and more.

INVESTIGATIVE APPROACH

The IIO's "start from zero" investigative approach reflects our commitment to independently establish the facts by gathering all relevant evidence about the incident without making any assumptions. The CCD will review all the evidence and, applying the relevant legal principles, will decide whether reasonable grounds exist to believe that a police officer may have committed an offence.

WHERE DOES THE IIO INVESTIGATE?

The IIO office is located in Surrey. However, IIO investigators may travel to any location in BC upon notification to conduct an investigation. The IIO has a dedicated team of forensic investigators who oversee or process scenes based on best practices and scene management protocols. They also direct and/or seize evidence relevant to the investigation.

HOW LONG DOES AN IIO INVESTIGATION TAKE?

There is no specific time frame that can be established for an investigation as the amount of time depends on many factors including the size and location of the scene, availability of evidence, number of involved officers, number of witnesses, the need for and dependence on specialized reports, and the complexity of issues related to the incident.

WHO CONDUCTS THE IIO INTERVIEW, AND WHAT IS THE IIO'S APPROACH TO INTERVIEWS?

During the investigation, statements may be obtained from witnesses such as civilians, paramedics, firefighters, affected persons and police officers. Officers who may have caused death or serious harm have protections under Canadian Charter of Rights but may provide a voluntary statement and/or notes if they wish.

The IIO does not expect every witness to have identical or a full recollection of the incident. To accurately capture an interviewee's statement, interviews are audio- and video-recorded. The best practice is to obtain statements as soon as possible. Timing of an interview is subject to individual availability and the circumstances specific to the investigation. Interviews are conducted by trained IIO investigators and held in a neutral location, when possible.

HOW ARE INVESTIGATIVE UPDATES PROVIDED?

The amount and type of information that can be shared during an investigation will depend on the specifics of each investigation and will be assessed on a case-by-case basis. All efforts will be made to provide timely information about the investigation to an affected person or their next-of-kin (in the case of a death). The IIO will also return any personal property seized wherever possible at the earliest opportunity. This may not be until the investigation has concluded.

If there is any information that can be disclosed or shared, then the APL or an investigator will provide the information from the investigative team to the affected person or family. Any questions from the affected person or family/next-of-kin can also be provided to the APL, who will pass on to the investigative team for consideration. If a question cannot be answered at a given point in time, the APL will keep a record of questions to be answered at the conclusion of the investigation or when the information can be shared.

Families will be provided regular updates** on the progress and stage of the investigation such as:

- Evidence collection stage
- Assessment/analytical stage
- Pending file review
- File conclusion

\*All updates provided are confidential in nature until the final outcome of the investigation is released.*

The IIO, usually through the APL, will make every attempt to inform the affected person or family/next-of-kin of the outcome of the investigation prior to an IIO media release.

If you have a question or concern, please contact your APL. If you do not know who your APL is, please call our main office number at (604) 586-5668 or send an email to the IIO at info@iiobc.ca.

WHAT IS A FILE REVIEW?

A file review is a regular, comprehensive process for each investigation where the evidence collected to that point is presented to the CCD and other senior IIO staff. The investigative progress is reviewed in detail and whether further investigative steps are needed.

DOES A FILE REVIEW MEAN A DECISION WILL BE MADE THAT DAY?

No. Additional lines of inquiry are often identified at file reviews, particularly early file reviews, which must be completed before a decision can be made.

INVESTIGATIVE OUTCOMES

During an investigation, the CCD is provided updates by the investigative team on a regular basis by briefings, file reviews and other update meetings. The APL is usually present in these meetings.

At the conclusion of an investigation, the CCD will review all the information and evidence. Based on the evidence and the applicable law, the CCD will make one of the following decisions:

- A. Refer investigation to Crown Counsel (BC Prosecution Service) – The CCD concludes there are reasonable grounds to believe that an officer may have committed an offence and refers the matter to Crown Counsel for consideration of charges.
- B. Conclude the investigation and issue a public report – The CCD concludes there are no reasonable grounds to believe that an officer may have committed an offence, and will issue a public report detailing the evidence, decision-making rationale, and legal principles applied in making the decision.
- C. Conclude the investigation and issue a media release – The CCD concludes there are no reasonable grounds to believe that an officer may have committed an offence, and a media release is issued to provide a brief description of the rationale for the decision.
- D. Conclude the investigation without issuing a public report – The CCD concludes there are no reasonable grounds to believe that an officer may have committed an offence, but it is not in the public interest to issue a public report or media release.

In order to approve the charges, Crown Counsel (BC Prosecution Service) must be satisfied that there is a substantial likelihood of conviction based on the evidence gathered by the IIO, and that prosecution is required in the public interest. This decision is made independently of the IIO and the CCD's recommendations.

Other external investigations may continue after the IIO investigation has concluded, such as a BC Coroners

Service investigation into the cause of death and police investigations into alleged crimes.

In addition to the IIO, there are two other independent agencies responsible for police oversight. The Office of the Police Complaint Commissioner (OPCC) is a civilian, independent office that oversees and monitors complaints and investigations involving municipal police in BC. The Civilian Review and Complaints Commission for the RCMP (CRCC) is an independent agency that ensures that public complaints made about the conduct of RCMP members are examined fairly and impartially. An investigation by either the OPCC or CRCC may follow the conclusion of an IIO investigation.

IF THE CCD REFERS THE CASE TO CROWN COUNSEL, WILL CHARGES BE LAID?

Crown Counsel makes the decision to approve charges.

WHAT HAPPENS IF THE INVESTIGATION IS NOT REFERRED FOR CONSIDERATION OF CHARGES?

If there are no reasonable grounds to believe that an officer may have committed an offence, the investigation will be concluded by issuing a public report, a media release, or without further public comment from the IIO.

WHERE CAN I LEARN MORE ABOUT THE OPCC AND CRCC?

You can refer to their websites <https://opcc.bc.ca/> and <https://www.crcc-ccetp.gc.ca/> respectively.

MEDIA

Media outlets may contact you regarding the incident and request your comment. You are not obligated to speak to the media, even if they ask.

If you do choose to speak to the media, we recommend you be prepared as they may ask unexpected and potentially challenging questions regarding the incident or other personal information. You should also be aware that information always has the potential to be misunderstood and may not be reported as you intended. Once something is published, unless it is factually incorrect it is difficult to change the public record. Note that investigative updates provided to you by the APL are confidential until the IIO investigation has been concluded and should not be shared with media representatives. Confidential information shared with the media, and read by potential witnesses, could negatively impact the IIO's investigation.

If a media outlet contacts you and you do not want to speak to them, you can direct them to call the IIO media line at (778) 988-1041 for comment. You are within your rights to ask them to stop contacting you.

The IIO often publishes a media release shortly after an incident occurs and may also issue one at the conclusion of an investigation. In the event of a media release, all efforts will be made to contact the affected person or their family in advance. Generally, IIO media releases do not contain personal information, such as the affected person's name, age, etc. Instead, they provide the date, time, and a brief description of the incident as it was reported to the IIO. If the IIO is seeking witnesses, a very basic description of the affected person may be included in the media release, such as describing what the individual was wearing.

In very rare circumstances, the IIO may request your consent to release the name of the affected person. This is most often done only if it is believed there are witnesses critical to the completion of a thorough investigation and there is no other way to reach those individuals. The IIO will advise in advance if this step is necessary.

DOES THE IIO PROVIDE PUBLIC UPDATES ABOUT INVESTIGATIONS IN PROGRESS?

The IIO typically does not make any public statement about the investigation process or progress unless such a statement is aimed at securing additional evidence, preserving the integrity of the investigation, or is required to ensure public confidence in police oversight.

MANAGING GRIEF AND TRAUMA

Incidents that result in serious harm or death can have serious emotional and psychological impacts on affected persons, their families, witnesses and communities. Grief does not apply only to the loss of a loved one but can also be experienced by those who have suffered serious injuries which may result in the loss of mobility, disfigurement or other consequences. Everyone manages grief differently, and there is no one set of reactions that are 'normal.' Some of the common symptoms and stages of grief will be discussed in this section.

The IIO's Affected Persons Program provides:

- Emotional support;
- Validation of the range of feelings you may experience;
- Referrals to services available in your community;
- Additional information regarding what you may experience during the grieving process;
- Practical information and tips; and
- Province-wide resources.

THE STAGES OF GRIEF

People often assume that grief should be over in only a fraction of the time it actually takes. In fact, bereavement does not follow a decreasing linear pattern but has many ups and downs, twists and turns.

It is not uncommon for the intensity of the grief to fluctuate over a period of time, lasting from several months to several years. It is important to note that even the person who is grieving may not show it twenty-four hours a day. Yet time is a therapeutic factor in the grief process, in that it enables the mourner to put things into perspective, to adapt to the necessary changes and to understand their own feelings.

Are there stages people go through in order to accomplish this? Yes, but as we know each person's grief will be individual. The normal sequence of grief can be described as follows:

PHASE OF SHOCK AND DISBELIEF

- The mourner is stunned, and often to protect themselves against the stress uses denial and/or numbness. “This couldn’t have happened,” “I don’t believe it,” “It’s only a bad dream” are the words one often hears.

PHASE OF YEARNING AND SEARCHING

- The mourner shows signs of wanting to find, recover and unite with the deceased person. As this is futile, one may often see anger, anxiety, tearfulness and a strong desire to keep the visual memory of the deceased alive.

PHASE OF DISORGANIZATION AND DESPAIR

- The mourner gives up the search for the deceased and feels depressed and has little inclination to look at the future to see any purpose in life. This is the beginning of redefining themselves and their situation.

PHASE OF REORGANIZATION

- The mourner gives up their attachment to the deceased loved one and begins to establish new ties. There is a gradual return of interests and desires. They adapt to a new role, learn new skills, make new attachments and learn to live with their loss.

TEN THINGS TO KNOW ABOUT GRIEF

1. Global effect of loss: the death of someone close to you can be life-transforming and effect all aspects of yourself and your life. Grief is a process between how things were and how they will be.
2. Grief is a natural process: the feelings you have at the death of someone you love is a consequence of living and loving. It is a normal part of life and a natural response to loss.
3. There are individual differences in grieving. This relates to your personality, past history of loss and your relationship with the deceased. There is no right or wrong way to grieve.
4. Children may have difficulties and may not talk about their feelings and thoughts. Simple information about death and grief is helpful to give so they are not frightened about what they do not know.
5. Social connections and support are important. Some people may not know how to provide support; some relationships may be altered. Other bereaved individuals may be able to assist.
6. Intense feelings not usual to yourself may occur. Your emotions, mind and reactions may seem unreliable. This may feel crazy, but it is natural. Fatigue, forgetfulness and irritability may result.
7. You may feel fluctuations in your feelings and responses at different times and phases of the grieving process. There may be unpredictable ups and downs, good and bad days.
8. Pay attention to selfcare; be gentle and kind to yourself. Try to keep up normal routine for health and social contact. Accept support from friends, family; consider counseling if needed.
9. Allow yourself time to grieve. There is no timetable; it takes as long as it takes. The loss will continue during your life. You will have times when you will think about and miss the deceased.
10. Grief can be spiritual as it brings a change in your life. You may experience healing and growth. Every person’s experience is different. There will likely be unexpected turns and insights.
